6/7/2012 12:49:30			Yes		Follow up is just as important as beginning a conversation with someone when networking. If you don't follow up, nothing comes of the new relationship.		N/A	N/A		Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 12:53:40			Yes		I definitely better understand the importance and vitality of following up with meetings and continuing discourse with colleagues/people I am able to meet within the profession.		How often should I be officially networking? I realize the importance for my career, but I also want to be aware of limits of networking and next steps for applicability in my career.			Very helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:01:26			Yes							Helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:01:47			Yes							Helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:01:56			Yes		to send Thank You after meeting someone					Very helpful	Yes

6/7/2012 13:02:40			Yes							Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:02:43			Maybe							Helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:02:54			Yes		Tips for introverts in the profession.		How to find networking oppritunities when traveling is a issue?			Very helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:02:56			Yes		More great ways to connect!		n/a	n/a		Very helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:03:28			Yes		I loved Pat's suggestions about how to work with HR officers, and on how to determine future avenues for your career. Ned's advice on using Twitter was also very nice. (I know, that's three things.) Everyone was fabulous.			JP is a card, but his section would benefit from a bit more prep.		Very helpful	Yes

6/7/2012 13:03:35			Yes					Moderating the question and answer at the end could be improved. Some questions didn't get answered, some only got answered in chat, and it wasn't clear who was supposed to be asking the questions of the speakers.		Helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:04:07			Yes		The importance of networking and that networking can be done informally.					Very helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:04:12			Yes		Networking works two ways - it's give and take.		How to remain connected with everyone in network. Sometimes networks can feel too big.	Happy with content.		Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:04:15			Yes		Some good reminders: remember to write notes on back of cards, try to keep Twitter more library-related if I want to use it for library networking. New ideas: making connections now will help with things you haven't even thought of yet down the line.		No lingering questions really, just need to get cracking.	Sending a list of participants Twitter names/emails so we can all connect easily with others, since we're all looking to expand our networks anyhow.		Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:04:29			Yes		I hadn't realized that #libchat actually had a designated time. I'll probably show up now that I know that!			The discussion got cut off a little early after the session ended. I wish a designated conversation space had been set up and designated for continued discussion.		Very helpful	Yes

6/7/2012 13:04:33			Yes		That everyone finds it a little uncomfortable and overwhelming, which is comforting. The advice about how to get started and where to go, little tips for actually doing the work of net working. It very much answered many of the questions I have been thinking of lately and eased some of my concerns.		None right now!	It was excellent, thank you very much!		Very helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:05:40			Yes		No new content, but I was encouraged about continuing with more positive networking.		Not sure I have any at the moment.	Although 1 hour is the standard time, I wonder if it's possible to make it 1:15 (1 hour for intro & presenting and 15 min. for Q&A)instead. I really liked having the many voices/presenters to help make the program engaging. The change in voices and visuals and styles was great for an online program. Thanks.		Helpful	No
6/7/2012 13:06:02			Yes		The most important places to network are conferences, unconfereces, alumni and vendor events.		Will the slides from the session be available online for us to peruse? I arrived about halfway through the webinar.	None that I can think of. What I saw was excellent. Thanks!		Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:07:05			Yes		Cold calls/emails are ok - I've always shied away from doing this because I didn't want to bother people, but all the presenters encouraged it and it sounds like people are generally open to it.		How to give back as a new librarian/student/unc librarian when you aren't in a position to offer a lot of help to colleagues yourself. I realize that networking is a two-way street, but sometimes I worry I'm doing too much taking and not enough giving. I do volunteer and participate in committees, but somehow I'm not sure if that's enough.	I did get bumped out of the session right at the end, when I hadn't had a chance to fully read the answers in the chat window. Maybe let people stay in the session after the official program ends to at least give them time to copy/paste and read at their leisure?		Very helpful	Yes

6/7/2012 13:15:37			Yes		Look at job ads and see what job ads are most appealing to you to determine your next step.			The program was great! Get the word out to more librarians and library students.		Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 13:22:35			Yes							Very helpful	Yes
6/7/2012 14:03:03			Yes		That it is acceptable to cold-contact people with jobs you aspire to have, and that it is OK to discuss with your HR rep the possibilities of exploring other jobs elsewhere.		How to find the time to do it.			Helpful	No
6/7/2012 14:55:16			Yes		Great tips for introductions, like the elevator speech intro. The idea that I don't have to be the networking queen and a sort of major player to network effectively.			Longer/more time for questions would have been great. I felt like this could be a really extended conversation.		Very helpful	No
6/11/2012 15:18:06			Yes		Not to be so intimidated by the idea of walking up to people and introducing myself. I'm definitely someone who falls into the shy rather than introvert category.		This isn't so much of a question as a comment for myself. I need to figure out the best way to leverage the friends and contacts I have from my old job and use them to my advantage as I pursue my MLIS and job opportunities.			Very helpful	Yes
